Administration Will Not Push Debtor Nations Pending Moratorium Action

PROBE FED PRISON BREAK

ALARM FELT OVER DELAY IN APPROVING YEAR DEBT HOLIDAY

ISSUE SHAPING ON QUESTION WHETHER OR NOT CONGRESS WILL OPPOSE PLAN

Washington, Dec. 12.—(UP)—Foreign nations having debt payments due the United States Dec. 15, will be told, if they inquire, that payment is not expected by this government.

The state and treasury departments have notified congress that they will explain to the debtor nations that although payments are legally due Dec. 15 because congress has not ratified the Hoover debt moratorium, ratification is expected soon and in the meantime the moratorium may be considered in effect.

Undersecretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills last night and today explained to house and senate leaders the action contemplated by the government. It was understood that in talking last night with house leaders he requested that they approve the position of the government and they refused. Speaker of the House Garner, Chairman Collier of the house ways and means committee, Democratic Floor Leader Rainey and Chairman Lathrop of the house committee on foreign relations, were at the conference with Mills.

Garner was understood to have told Mills that if the administration had been anxious to have the moratorium passed by Dec. 15, a special session of congress could have been called.

Mills conferred with senate leaders this morning. As far as was known he did not ask formal approval of the contemplated procedure by them.

Eleven countries have debt payments due on Dec. 15, amounting to $125,000,000. They do not include Germany, Austria or Greece, whose payments are due later.

DOMINION SPLIT ON SEAWAY DEMANDS HALT IN PROGRAM

DEMAND THAT PREMIER FIRST MUST BE TAKEN INTO CON- SIDERATION ON PLANS

Quebec, Dec. 12.—(UP)—A St. Lawrence waterway controversy similar to that between New York state and the federal government had developed today between Quebec and dominion authorities.

Peter Bercovitch, legislative representative for Montreal-St. Louis, echoed the sentiment of Quebec by demanding that dominion halt waterway negotiations with Washington until the voice of his province was heard and its advice followed.

"There should," declared Bercovitch, "be no further negotiations until the premier of this province is first taken into the confidence of dominion authorities."

He argued that the Canadian section of the development should not be undertaken until the people were ready to absorb sufficient power available to pay the cost of the project.

Bercovitch declared Canada "must never consent" to any diminution of her present sovereign rights on any part of the St. Lawrence river wholly within Canadian territory.

LOVE AFFAIR OVER NEGRO MAID HELD BLAME IN MURDER

Waterville, Me., Dec. 1.—(UP)—M. Merton Levine, 24, a son of a wealthy cattle man, was arrested today on a charge of murdering his 20-year-old brother, Abraham, as the climax, police said, of a love affair involving a negro maid.

Miss Eleanor Johnson, the maid employed in the sumptuous Levine home here, was arrested and charged with being an accessory before and after the fact.

Police also held as material witnesses Samuel Morrison, 50, a negro described as a friend of Miss Johnson, and Miss Emil Boyle, said to be Morrison's sweetheart.

All were to be arraigned before Municipal Judge Charles W. Atchley later today.

Abraham Levine was shot to death with a revolver more than 11 weeks ago while writing a check. The name of the negro maid figured prominently in the investigation that followed.

According to police, Morrison admitted he bought the gun, using money given him by Miss Johnson.

They're All in One Big Happy Family

HOOVER PLEADS FOR UNIFIED ACTION ON 'NON-PARTISAN' PLAN

Washington, Dec. 12.—(UP)—The anticipated battle between the White House and congress was on today, with President Hoover leading the administration forces in a slashing offensive.

The struggle, which is over means to restore the country quickly to economic stability and prevent a financial crisis this winter, was expected to develop into one of the most bitter conflicts between the legislative and executive branches of the government in recent history.

The president issued a statement demanding unity of action on his "non-partisan program" designed to turn "the tide of deflation and start the country upon the road to recovery." His attack came on the heels of sharp criticism in congress to his financial program and plans for loosening credits, as well as his war debt moratorium.

He emphasized that while foreign problems were important, "we must depend upon ourselves." Mr. Hoover then reviewed his financial relief program, summarizing it in 11 salient points and demanding prompt action.

The points dealt with provisions for meeting the unemployment problem, strengthening the federal land bank system "in the interest of the farmer," aid to home owners, city and farm; aid to small depositors in closed banks, enlargement of discount facilities of the federal reserve bank; creation of a reconstruction finance corporation to loosen credits in this emergency; aid in railroads; revision of banking laws, and in general the "maintenance of the public finance on a sound basis."

He proposed to do by "drastic economy," keeping down national expenditures in the government; and a "temporary increase in taxation." He also urged "maintenance of the American system of individual initiative and individual and community responsibility."

HENNEPIN J. P. HELD IN SWINDLING OF WORLD WAR VET

CHARGED WITH CONVERTING $2,500 OF WARD'S MONEY TO HIS OWN USE

New York, Dec. 12.—(UP)—Charged with swindling an incompetent world war veteran, Gustave M. Sachs, attorney, inventor, and for nine years justice of the peace in Hennepin county, Minnesota, left here today with a United States marshal to face trial in the federal court at Minneapolis.

Sachs, who is alleged to have converted $2,500 belonging to Albert Bren, whose guardian he was, to his own use claims that it is all a mistake—"just a matter of bookkeeping stirred up by some enemy back home."

He came to New York two years ago, he said, when eastern capitalists became interested in his inventions which included:

A floating airport for use in mid-ocean.

A speed boat that could cross the ocean.

A hydro-electric plant generated by the ocean waves.

But the depression came along, he relates, and the capitalists cooled toward his ideas. So he went to work in the circulation department of a newspaper.

Knutson Asks Probe of Intercoastal Trade

Washington, Dec. 12.—(UP)—A resolution directing the Interstate Commerce commission to investigate the possibility of regulating rates in the intercoastal trade was introduced in the house today by Rep. Knutson.

The second of a series of inside drills was held last night in Central Fire Station. Twenty men in four squads practiced laying out hose. Fire Chief Frank W. Fuller was in charge. The next drill will take place Wednesday.

Planes Take Goldseekers To Scene of New Strike

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 12.—(UP)—An airplane gold rush to strikes in the Island Lake region, approximately 370 miles north of Winnipeg, was underway today.

Five planes which took off at almost simultaneously Thursday were expected to be nearing the site of the properties that have already been staked while a sixth plane which left Winnipeg yesterday should be leaving Lac du Bonnet this morning, half way to Island Lake. The six planes carried 14 persons.

The interest in the territory started several weeks ago when representatives of two lumber companies chartered planes and flew to Island Lake where they staked properties on several islands. Assays from the stakings were reported to have shown high ore content.

Options on the property staked were obtained by the Lindsey interests and Noah Timmins, one of the best known mining men in the world, was said to have representatives interested in the strike.

So far all movements to Island Lake have been by plane since the trip by dog sled takes four weeks. One of the planes carried supplies of food and gasoline. The field is extensive enough for all prospectors, it was said.

10,000 LAKES BODY NOTE STARTS PROBE SEEKS MORE POWER FOR GAME WARDENS OF CRASH VICTIM

(Special to The Daily Dispatch)
St. Paul, Dec. 12.—A. D. Darge, St. Paul, today was president of the Ten Thousand Lakes-Greater Minnesota association.

Election of officers last night concluded the 15th annual convention of the organization. Darge succeeded Frank S. Gold of Minneapolis, who has served two years and who declined re-election.

Other officers elected included Rep. Otto C. Neuman, Wheaton, first vice president; R. D. Handy, Duluth, second vice president; Fred Schlipf, St. Cloud, third vice president; H. C. Hotelling, secretary; C. B. Mills, Minneapolis, treasurer.

Resolutions adopted recommended that the state highway patrol be given broader powers in criminal cases and that game wardens be empowered to enforce laws governing the operation of motorboats.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 12.—(UP)—Milwaukee and Superior police today investigated a report that George Smith, 40, Milwaukee, was kidnapped November 4 near Waukesha.

Martin E. Mickelson, Superior, sent a letter Dec. 4 to Miss Edith Gartner, at whose home here Smith roomed, enclosing a note addressed to her and purported to have been written by Smith. Mickelson was killed in an automobile accident the same day.

The note from Smith which Miss Gartner turned over to Milwaukee police, and which has been transmitted to officials at Superior, said:

"I suppose you are wondering where I am. I was stopped by a car the day I left for Waukesha and was forced to drive three men north. They have me guarded in a log camp, somewhere near Superior, as close as I can make out. They are fair but keep very close watch on me."

OLSON IN CHARGE, BREMER PRESIDENT OF CITIZENS STATE

TWO PROMOTIONS VOTED BY DIRECTORS IN FILLING POST LATE PRESIDENT

Continuance of the present personnel with promotions of two officers, the Citizens State Bank of Brainerd today pledged to the public the maintaining of standards of efficiency, service and protection of customers that prevailed since its organization 40 years ago and was dominant during the tenure of the late R. J. Tinkelpaugh as president.

Bremer Becomes President
Otto Bremer, St. Paul, widely known capitalist in the northwest as a man of enviable judgment and foresight, has been elevated from vice president to president to fill the vacancy created by the death of Tinkelpaugh.

Olson Placed in Charge
Elmer O. Olson, cashier of the bank since 1926, an employee of the bank for 15 years and an officer who has been in direct contact with all business dealings collaborating with Tinkelpaugh in the interests of the bank has been named by the board of directors to the post of authority in charge.

M. E. Ryan will continue to serve in the capacity of vice president. Ryan has been a director of the Citizens State Bank of Brainerd for 15 years and has known Bremer for 25 years. Ryan has been a resident of Brainerd for 28 years.

Bremer is president of the American National Bank of St. Paul and vice president of the Commerce State Bank of St. Paul. He is also active in the management and interested as a stockholder and officer in several other banks in the Twin Cities.

Bremer is recognized as an investor in bank stocks. He takes no salary from any bank except the American National and insists that any bank in which he is interested be run by local people.

The personnel of the bank further includes: E. W. Wise and James K. Tinkelpaugh, assistant cashiers; Miss Irene Cardie, Mrs. George Smith, bookkeepers; Miss Evelyn Ryan, clerk and Miss Evelyn Fink, stenographer. All employees and officers of the bank are well known in Brainerd and the district and have gained many friendships.

Olson who has been vested with authority is a Brainerd born man. He was educated in local schools and received business training at Duluth. He is now and has been the last three years a member of the Brainerd Board of Education. He is also a member of several fraternal organizations in the city.

His policy in brief will be the following, he stated:

"We intend to follow out the principles and ideals Mr. Tinkelpaugh has heretofore established. Our main object at all times is the protection and safety of our depositors. We hope to retain the confidence and friendships we have made with the assurance that we will be pleased to serve the public in the same spirit and manner that the bank has tried to do in the last 40 years."

The Citizens State Bank includes in its holdings the deposit liabilities of the Ft. Ripley bank.

In 1927 the bank took over the deposit liabilities of the Commercial State Bank of Brainerd.

Tribute to Late President

In tribute to the service and memory of their late president, the Board of Directors paid the following eulogy at its meeting Friday afternoon on motion of M. E. Ryan and E. W. Wise:

WHEREAS, R. J. Tinkelpaugh, and, WHEREAS, in our many years of association with him his unswerving loyalty to duty, his genial companionship, and his high ideals and practices of a Christian gentleman has endeared him to all.

THEREFORE, Be It Resolved by our officers and employees, that we deeply regret his passing and extend to his loved ones our sincerest sympathy.

FUR FARM ATTACHES METED OUT 2 YEAR TERMS IN PRISON

SENTENCE PASSED ON CHARLES W. HENKE AND FRANK P. O'MALLEY

St. Paul, Dec. 12.—(UP)—Two former officials of the Ten Thousand Lake Fur Farms corporation were sentenced today to two years each in the Leavenworth federal penitentiary on charges of using the mails to defraud.

Judge John B. Sanborn in federal court pronounced sentence on Charles W. Henke, vice president of the defunct corporation, and Frank P. O'Malley, secretary. O'Malley's sentence was suspended with the provision that he pay a $2,000 fine.

At the same time Judge Sanborn dismissed indictments against 15 other defendants.

Questioned by Judge Sanborn prior to the sentencing, both Henke and O'Malley disclaimed knowledge of any intent to defraud investors who lost approximately $600,000 by purchase of muskrat breeding units.

Each said that he served the company in a minor capacity and stated that the scheme to defraud was originated by A. A. Robbins, president of the firm. Both said that they had the assurance of Robbins at one time when the firm faced a financial crisis that "things would turn out all right."

The break, so well-planned that the convicts knew every step, occurred at 9 o'clock yesterday right in Warden White's own office," Eckholdt said.

"White, three prison clerks and myself found ourselves face to face with the criminals' revolvers and shotguns. We were forced to accompany them right through the prison main gates to the highway, almost 500 yards away from the wall."

The warden was forced to go with the six desperadoes as they commandeered a passing motor car and headed for the country.

LENZ-JACOBY TAKE COMMANDING LEAD OF 5,650 POINTS OVER CULBERTSONS

New York, Dec. 12.—(UP)—Ely Culbertson's two-demand, approach-forcing system of bidding in contract bridge is getting the talk knocked out of it, if the Culbertson-Lenz match, which goes into its fifth session tonight, is a criterion.

That's not all: Culbertson's nose was almost punched during one rubber last night.

When time was called at the end of the 28th rubber, Lenz and Jacoby leading the approach-forcers by 5650 points, were as happy as a pair of Boy Scouts who had just succeeded in making fire by rubbing sticks together.

Though the run of cards once more was definitely in the direction of the Lenz-Jacoby team, the Culbertsons were not without breaks of luck last night. On the following hand, for instance, they made 330, in addition to blocking a 100 rubber for their opponents, when they thought they were making a sacrifice bid and were sure to be set.

Lenz and Jacoby dealt and passed. Culbertson passed. Lenz bid one no trump and Mrs. Culbertson doubled—an unusually weak double, justified because the Culbertsons were not vulnerable and the opponents were. Jacoby, with two and a half honor tricks, bid two no trump.

Culbertson made a desperate three heart bid with the king of that suit as his only face card. It was passed twice, and Jacoby made what looked to be a safe double.

Lenz opened the jack of diamonds. With Mrs. Culbertson holding only a single in that suit, and Culbertson holding a singleton spade, a cross rough was established and four hearts were made. Since the north and south official system team could have made three no trumps for game and rubber, the total point swing on the hand was 1,395 points.

LEGION AUXILIARY PLANS ACTIVITIES OF POPULAR APPEAL

A program of activities of widely varied character will be carried out by the local unit of the American Legion Auxiliary during the coming year. Mrs. Roy Wyre, unit president, announced following completion of a tentative outline of the unit's program for 1932. The wide scope of the activities will enable members of the unit to take part in the type of work most appealing to them and will give all members an opportunity to participate in the active life of the Auxiliary, Mrs. Wyre said.

Work for the welfare of the disabled veterans and the families of the dead and disabled will again be foremost in the Auxiliary's program for 1932. The increasing number of veterans who are breaking down from the results of their war service and the steadily growing toll which death is taking from among the men who served in the World War are calling for constantly enlarged efforts by the Auxiliary. Economic conditions are making the situation of the disabled and the dependent families especially serious this year and Mrs. Wyre anticipates heavier demands than ever before for Auxiliary aid.

Another activity which will have an important place in the Auxiliary's program next year will be its Americanism work. In this work the Auxiliary is striving to develop a better understanding of American ideals and institutions, and to awaken a keener interest in the duties of citizenship. Radical groups are making strenuous efforts to win the support of American women, Mrs. Wyre said, and the Auxiliary is meeting their propaganda with a program of Americanism education.

The Auxiliary will work with renewed vigor for the maintenance of an adequate national defense, supporting the American Legion's stand for preparedness measures sufficient to guarantee the safety of the country until the possibility of war is forever past. Through national and state conferences and other activities, it will endeavor to give the women of the country a clear conception of the need for defensive preparations, and to check sentimental pacifism among women.

Community betterment projects designed to increase the social, educational, economic and recreational opportunities of the community will also occupy attention of the Auxiliary. Through its association with the Women's Auxiliary of Fidae, the inter-allied veterans' federation, the Auxiliary will work to strengthen international understanding and good will. Social activities different types will be included in the year's program.

Enrollment of members for 1932 has been started by the local unit and Mrs. Wyre is urging all eligible women to come into the organization at this time in order to get started in the year's activities.

AMERICAN QUARTET EQUAL TO STANDARD DEMANDED BY CLUB

LISTENERS AT MUSICAL CLUB PROGRAM PLEASSED WITH FINE PERFORMANCE

By MRS. W. C. COBB

Satisfied patrons spell success in art as well as in business. But it is not always easy to maintain artistic standards and please popular audiences. Although the audience that greeted the third number of the American Quartet on the Musical club's artists' course at the high school auditorium Friday evening was probably somewhat selective, rather than strictly popular, they were certainly well pleased.

Perhaps the two words that best define that artistic satisfaction are balance and variety. Both voices and program were well balanced and both afforded a pleasing variety. And the well-balanced voices were sustained by unusual work at the piano. Classical numbers were balanced with popular, and by folk-songs, serious by humorous numbers. The program announced, Raymond Koch, baritone, was sensitive to the response of his audience and substituted or added numbers to suit their taste. For instance, in the first group the popular number "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes" was substituted for the third program number. Although this favorite radio number has become somewhat hackneyed, the arrangement was one made by the conductor-accompanist, Edwin Stanley Seder, and was interesting.

Sides serving to acquaint the audience with this virtuoso's talent as a composer. They had already recognized his talent as an accompanist and had observed that his usually subordinate part was an intrinsic part of almost every number. In fact, he was obliged to acknowledge, applause as often as any member of the quartet.

It is difficult to select other members of this musical organization, for honorable mention because no one voice surpassed the others in quality of tone, strength, or smoothness. It was this equality of artistic merit and natural talent that afforded the balance and blending of tone that was so satisfying.

For a similar reason, it is difficult and almost superfluous to comment on particular numbers on this program. The first group consisted of a choral from the cantata "Sleepers Awake" by J. S. Bach and ancient folk-songs, with the exception of the substituted number already mentioned. The second group was the duet between Thais and the Monk, when they reach the oasis in the desert, sung by Mr. Koch, baritone and Miss Helen Bickerton, soprano, and another duet from Mozart's Don Giovanni, quite different in character. The encore to this group is worthy of special mention. It was "The Song of Love" from "Blossom Time" and was gloriously sung.

The third quartet group opened with two humorous numbers—"Kalinka," an old Russian folk-song arranged by Schindler and sung with verve and good characterization, and "The Spinning Top," another song of the people done over by Rinsky-Korsakoff. The two other numbers of this group were given a truly artistic interpretation. In "The Nightingale" by Tchaikovsky, one could almost feel the cold winds that sweep over the vast Russian steppes. Rachmaninoff's "Glorious Foreer," composed for the service of the now deposed Greek orthodox church in Russia, was characterized by sure attack, well balanced voice work and excellent ensemble. In fact, the same might be said of every quartet on the program.

The fourth group consisted of a duet by B. Fred Wise, tenor and Esther Muenstermann, contralto—"The Love Duet" from Shanewis, by Cadman. This was characterized by splendid power of sustained tones and was enthusiastically applauded. They responded with the ever popular "Nepolitan Nights."

The last group was, of course, by the whole quartet and consisted of "The Chant of the Corn Grinders, by Lieurance, two negro Spirituals and an old nursery rhyme, modernized by Sturkow-Ryder, "Sing a Song of Sixpence."

Several encores were demanded and given. "One Alone," arranged from the "Desert Song" by Stanley Seder and also arrangement of "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia," a medley of popular songs, and an old German Christmas Carol. Members of the Musical club were pleased to see that so many of the high school students are using their tickets. Intelligent and attentive listening to such concerts affords a cultural education.

50 Years of Efficient Performance

Serving Brainerd Half a Century

Like an old family servant, we feel as though we deserve a place in the hearts of our townsmen. We've been employed by them for fifty years—aiding, assisting, working for and with them. To hold that place of trust and confidence for so long a period is testimony in itself of ability and efficiency. We plan to make our position of increasing strength and worth—to lay an impregnable edifice in the next fifty years on the foundation of the past fifty.

REVEAL WARDEN SHOT IN EFFORT TO SAVE KIDNAPED GIRL

Joseph Gates, about three miles southwest of Leavenworth. Their automobile stalled in a ditch, they entered the house and kidnaped Gates' 18-year-old married daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Gates Phillips, and her young son. Outside the house, they decided to split. Three men set out after a corn field, where they were later captured.
The three ringleaders of the plot, Curtis, Durrill and Green stayed with White and Mrs. Phillips. They forced four Leavenworth youths out of their small coupe and started to drive away. Mrs. Phillips, however, ran down the road, screaming hysterically, grasped in Green's right hand. White, fearing the girl would be shot, grappled with Green. Green wounded him in the shoulder.
Fire on Poses
The three criminals, pursuing possession close at hand, made their way another six miles to Salisbury's home. They forced their way through the door, and started firing on troopers and guards as they arrived at the scene. Salisbury escaped to safety by climbing through a window.
"Green, seeing the game was up, shot and killed Curtis and Durrill and then took his own life," said Coroner Theodore Eexton, of Leavenworth county, after an inquest. "Curtis and Durrill had been shot through the right ear. A wound, showing powder burns, was in Green's head about an inch above his ear. We found a gun in Green's right hand."
Warden White, confined to the Cushing hospital, was kept isolated today by federal operatives. Physicians said he was making "as good progress as could be expected."
Poses, aided by bloodhounds, continued to search for Thayer.
It was reported that department of justice agents were making an investigation in San Francisco that may shed light on the plot.
Reports came from apparently reliable sources that Mrs. Gladys Berta, wife of Charles Berta, the wounded convict, apparently had an advance tip that her husband "might get out of Leavenworth."
When Mrs. Berta was informed her husband was one of the convicts who kidnaped Warden White she received the word in a knowing manner, according to reports received here.

FINE WORK BY CITY FORCE--

Alert to their duties in promoting safety for both pedestrians and automobile drivers, the city street department has spread sand and gravel at all intersections in the business section. The early action following the snow and subsequent thaw and freezing is to be commended and typifies excellent direction of the city street force.

In this work, however, the department could go a step farther by extending this safety measure to all entrances to arterial streets. For instance, it is almost impossible to come to a stop at the entrance to Kingwood at either Fourth or Sixth street, because of the icy surfaces making both driving and walking extremely hazardous. It might be well that all entrances to through streets be protected in the same manner as were the intersections in the business district.

THE GRIST MILL RETURNS--

The old-time grist mill seems to be returning to the American landscape once more. Sometime ago there was talk of establishing one in the Brainerd community.

An eastern newspaper revealed the other day that in many places, especially in the south and southwest, farmers are adopting their grandfathers' custom of taking their grain to a little neighborhood mill, getting it ground into flour or meal, and returning it to the family cupboard.

It is a long time since the grist mill has cut much of a figure in American life. In the old days, of course, it had a big place. It was the center of innumerable frontier communities, and the bread that the farmer ate was made from grain he raised.

Lately, though, the grist mill had become a picturesque ruin. Almost every small town in the south and middle west had as its memento of bygone days a tumble-down structure, rapidly falling into decay, by some ancient millpond on the edge of town. The railroad and the big flour mill pushed the grist mill almost entirely out of the picture.

If it is coming back now, even in a small measure, it is probably due to the depression; but in a lot of ways it is an extremely sensible step for the farmer to take.

The average wheat grower never so much as sees a flour mill. He sends his grain to the market and buys his flour at the nearest grocery store; and when wheat prices are down—as they are, most of the time—he suffers.

Suppose, though, that there is a grist mill in the neighborhood. The farmer, then, not only is producing a commodity for the market; he is raising the very grain that he and his family eat, and they will have plenty of bread even if the bottom falls out of the wheat market.

Perhaps, in a time when agricultural distress seems deeply rooted and of endless extent, the country could use the old-fashioned grist mill to a pretty good advantage.

AS ROMANCE PASSES--

The news that the English Channel pilot boats which operate out of the Solent are to be changed from sail-driven cutters to steam tugs isn't particularly important, on this side of the Atlantic. A few people, though, will read it with regret—for it marks the passing of one of the last strongholds of the marlinpike seamanship of the old days.

There have been pilot boats in the Solent ever since England first sent merchant ships to distant seas; and through the centuries the men who manned these swift cutters have been seamen of the first order, able to keep their little vessels at sea in any kind of weather.

Of course, the new steam tugs will breed seamen, just as the old cutters did. Yet the change marks the loss by the old-time sailing ship of another province—almost its last. The steamship is almost universal now. One more link connecting the present day with the age of clipper ships is being snapped.

This, to be sure, is inevitable; and it may be that we spend more time than is good for us in lamenting the change from the picturesque and romantic old ways to the efficient new ones.

After all, these changes are taking place, and there isn't anything we can do about it except make the best of it. We can't swim upstream, no matter how much we might like to. Our grandfathers may have lived in a world that was more colorful than our own, but we can't get back to it.

In fact, we are very likely cheating ourselves when we mourn the departure of the sailing vessel, the stage coach, the gaudy Mississippi river steamboat and those other adjuncts of the past. Keeping our eyes on them, we fail to see the colorful things that our own age provides.

What, for instance, is more purely romantic than an air-mail plane, splitting the sky at midnight, its motor droning high above sleeping villages? Can't a railway train, symbol of controlled power, be a thing of beauty? Isn't the man who sets out on a two-weeks' auto tour doing something for which the men of the old days would devoutly envy him?

FOOTBALL FATALITIES--

It is very disturbing to read that more than a score of American boys have been killed in a game of football this fall.

Football, in many ways, is a very fine game. Certainly it provides pleasure and wholesome recreation for many thousands of youngsters each year. And, considering the numbers that indulge in it, the fatality list is not indicative of such a terribly high percentage of risk.

And yet—that toll is a dreadful load for any game to carry. It is a load no other sport has to carry. It is hard, too, to see just how the game can be modified to remove the element of risk. Football is essentially a game of violent bodily collisions. Remove them, and it is no longer football.

A country that kills 30,000 people a year with its autos doesn't worry much about fatal accidents. But the football situation is beginning to be extremely disturbing.

A tax-supported university in the middle west recently dismissed a co-ed for failing to keep up passing grades in her studies. The girl went to court and got an injunction restraining the university from dismissing her, on the ground that a tax-supported school cannot dismiss anyone who pays the entrance fees.

Now the higher courts have knocked out this injunction; and the step ought to lead to a saner viewpoint on the function of the state university.

Even if such an institution is supported by the taxpayers, it has a right to say who may and who may not enjoy its privileges. Each of its students is, in a very real sense, getting help from the state treasury. In dismissing students who fail to study, the university is simply protecting the taxpayers' interests.

CHAPTER I

WHEN, in the year nineteen hundred and sixteen, Professor Fenwick and his wife Ann died of influenza during the same week in late March, their acquaintances thanked a merciful providence that the three little girls had those perfectly charming grandparents who were willing and glad to take them right in and give them a good home. The nurse in the house at the time, one sturdy Gladys Clapp, was the only person who felt the least apprehension as to the tranquil future of the Fenwicks' daughters: Ann, 14 years old; Cecily, eight years old; and baby Mary-Frances, one year old on the third of last February.

The children's grandmother had thrown the two front doors wide open as Gladys came, carrying the baby up the steps, with Ann and Cecily lagging behind.

"Welcome," she had called, in her creamy sweet voice. "Welcome, welcome home, my darlings!" And in spite of her flesh, and she was extraordinarily fat, and disregarding the fancy, lacy, perfumed, rose-colored silk thing she was wearing, she had gone right down on her knees to embrace Ann and Cecily, and they had to stoop far over to her while she cooed and shed tears into their white necks—tears that trickled wetly on to their little stomachs and made them squirm unbecomingly.

Grand—the grandfather, you know—entered. He had a round white beard, and flowing white hair and, just now, tears stood in his kindly blue eyes, and he knew it. It was he who took the baby, murmuring something that sounded to Gladys' scripturally unaccustomed ears like, "the yeast of tears." He was a tall man, and he made a grand picture standing there with that blessed baby—shocked to momentary silence—in his arms. Reluctantly Gladys turned from it to close the two front doors, which had been forgotten, and which were allowing gusts of the rainy March wind to sweep into the hall. She spoke to Rosalie—the grandmother you know—who was still blowing pink silk and lace about on the floor.

"Did the valises and things get here all right?"

There had been nothing amusing in so far as Gladys could see, connected with her question, but Rosalie gurgled some laughter before she said, "They are all unpacked, and the darling, dainty little things are in place in the three little cozy rooms." (The rooms were enormous; but, since they needed for the time to be small and cozy, in Rosalie's mind they were small and cozy.)

"Three?" questioned Gladys. "The baby isn't going to be put off in a room by herself, is she?"

Rosalie's manner grew grave and charmingly judicial. "You think it unwise?"

Grand answered before Gladys had a chance to do so. "Give your self no uneasiness, my good woman—my very good woman," he added with a flattering smile. "Everything shall be arranged for the best comfort and good of all. This shall be done. It may not be done today. It may not be done tomorrow. But soon, very soon, it shall be accomplished. Convey that message, if you will be so kind. All things shall soon be arranged for the best good and the best comfort of all, to our dear son."

"Yes, sir," said Gladys, frightened.

ANN

fully flustered because she knew that never in this world could she remember all of that like that.

Cecily, a fairly pretty little girl even at eight years old, and soon to be prettier, pulled at the tassel on the baby's shoe and said, "Father won't understand. He hasn't understood anything for three days. It is the fever's fault. They are afraid Mother may have contracted it."

She ducked her chin lower and blinked her long lashes up and down over her gray eyes.

Grand opened the doors again and with bow and gesture bade Gladys Clapp a benevolent good-afternoon. "Mind the third step," he called. The third step was broken right down in the center.

A WOMAN named Josephine Loehden was working for Grand and Rosalie at that time. When she had come a year ago to apply for the position of general houseworker in the Fenwick mansion, she had said, "My name is Josephine Loehden. When I work I sleep. When I sleep I do more work with one hand than most women do with two hands. But I want my pay."

When she married the Fenwick mansion, five months after the day Gladys had brought the children to live with their grandparents, she made much the same speech. "When I work I sleep," she said. "When I sleep I sleep. I am not a dog. For five months I have worked like a dog. Now I will go and sleep for five months and I will not be rested. And I want my pay."

A procession of houseworkers followed, after that: women who came through the front door and left through the back door rapidly and to march time. One with a deformed shoulder, whose name was Christina Eugenia Passafiume, stayed for more than a year before she went away through the front door and on a stretcher to the ambulance that took her to the charity hospital. Three months later, Christina Eugenia Passafiume's lawyer (if you please) threatened suit against Jonathan Fenwick for $150, six months' unpaid salary due to his client. Grand sold one of the few remaining lots, on which he had kept the taxes paid, and the affair was settled, promptly and quietly and out of court.

Ann knew nothing of this, but the talk with Rosalie, precipitated at least by Miss Fiume's insolence, marked a turning point in Ann's life. She was 16 years old, by this time, and in her freshman year at Reed College, where John Fenwick had taught and was well remembered.

"Darling," Rosalie began, "I've been thinking today—such jolly, merry little thoughts. They have flown about me all day long like sweet wee song birds, Biddie birds" (in a lower register). "Do you know what they have been singing to me? Independence, over and over. Independence, and hummies" (Ann shuddered slightly but Rosalie did not notice), "and sharing one another's burdens, and—um—all that sort of thing, you know."

ANN said, "Oh?" Rosalie sat and smiled with her tiny Cupid's-bow mouth, embedded away up above the first of her three chins, and nodded her head with its crown of yellow hair (Grand always called it a crown, and she had ever so much of it, and it was "touched up" merely), and said nothing. So Ann was forced to say, "What do you mean?"

Rosalie meant that this servant problem was torturing her by day and tormenting her by night: the ingratitude, the inefficiency, the necessity of having daily contact with—it was Rosalie's turn to shudder, and Ann noticed "that sort of person." So it seemed to Rosalie that with three girls in the house (Rosalie, Ann, and Cecily) all lovingly eager to help one another, they should be able to manage, easily and happily, with a charwoman coming in once or twice a week.

So charwomen came, though more often they did not come, and three months went along, somehow, and it was Ann who sought Rosalie for the second talk. She began forthrightly. "Rosalie, didn't Father leave any money at all?"

Rosalie leaned back in her chair and held out her white hands—little dimples, and little diamonds, but big amethysts and one gold flower filigree with a seed pearl—"Come to Rosalie, darling—nestle here. I want to have a talk with you, a heart-to-heart talk with my little girl."

It developed that there had been a small life insurance, but that John ("He wasn't practical. Aren't you glad and happy, Ann dear, that your father was not a wholly practical man?") had, months before he had passed on, borrowed heavily against it to meet—well, very urgent obligations, one supposes. No—beautiful memories, high ideals and—um—things of that sort were all that John had been able to leave behind him. All—and yet everything.

"And us girls, of course," Ann suggested.

"To carry out his visions, to fulfill his hopes and ideals, to—um—" She paused. Ann had sighed, heavily. Rosalie began again: "Was there something, dear—some girlish adornment, some little pleasure that you had set your heart on? Tell me. Tell me all about it, and perhaps, if it is wise, Grand and I can manage it for you."

"No," Ann said. "Nothing. I had thought—hoped—No. I guess I'll have to quit school for this term, anyway."

AND that, it leaked out, was precisely what Grand and Rosalie had been desiring but disliking to mention.

On Thursday afternoon Ann went to see Dr. Elm and asked him to lend her $50, which was the tuition fee charged by the business college she had selected. He wrote the check, and a prescription for a tonic, and could not remember what it was all about when, four months later Ann called at his office to pay him five dollars.

"I have a position," she explained. "But I get only $10 a week, and I have something to pay with this other five. I'll bring five again next week."

Dr. Elm detained her. He asked questions. Ann answered them all. The Redfern Plumbing and Heating Company. She liked it pretty well. She was feeling pretty well. Yes, she had gone to Reed College, but she had stopped for a number of reasons. Her sister, Cecily, was going to college. No, Cecily now was in the sixth grade at grammar school.

After 11 Years

Indianapolis—For the first time in eleven years, a woman saw her former husband, and their 17-year-old boy shook hands with his father. The meeting occurred in jail, where the father, John R. Horne, had been confined on charges filed by his wife, of neglecting his child, John.

Sister MARY'S KITCHEN

One of the fundamental rules of cooking for children is to vary their dietary in such a way that a balanced diet is maintained. Many adult ills may be traced to a lack of well chosen foods during childhood.

Certain foods make strong bones, others develop muscles, some create energy for immediate needs and still others are a protection against disease. All these foods must be provided daily to make children grow and keep healthy.

Milk, vegetables, cereals and fruits must be used in abundance! Not much meat is necessary; one specialist in children's diets says that the "meat portion" should be the size of the palm of the child's hand.

Eggs and certain kinds of fish are good, although the method of serving them must be considered. Intense heat makes both of these foods hard to digest.

Milk is essential. Every growing child needs a quart of milk a day. This need not all be consumed as a beverage, but can be used in cream soups and sauces, custards and simple puddings and on cereals and vegetables. If the child drinks his quart of milk in addition to these various dishes, so much the better.

Fruit Stimulates Appetite

Fruit is good for its mineral and vitamin content and often acts as a stimulant to a child's appetite. Either fresh, stewed dried fruits or canned fruits are valuable in every meal of the day. The mother who has difficulty in persuading her child to eat vegetables can use an extra amount of fruit in his diet to advantage.

Leafy vegetables are very important. They have a unique value in being rich sources of tooth and bone building material. A child as young as two years of age should have one or two leafy vegetables every day.

Cereals are valuable and can be used in "gruels" from the time a child is seven or eight months old. Gradually thickened, they may appear in "porridge" form by the time he is a year and a half old. In a restricted diet, cereals can be used profitably twice a day. Two kinds can be served for the sake of variety. Preference should be given to those made from whole grains.

Germany Tests Tailless Airplane

The plane, designed by Alexander Lippisch, stands only three feet high, and is powered by a small engine of 28 horse-power. It measures 42 feet across the wings, and has an area of 262 square feet.

"SHIP AND TRAVEL BY RAIL" ... SHOP WHERE SHOPPING IS GOOD!

Business invariably goes where it is invited—and that holds true in any community regardless of size or might.

Right now, Brainerd is in the midst of a great Ship and Travel by Rail Movement . . and backed to the limit by Brainerd merchants. They're shipping by rail . . the goods that you and the other fellow buy and consume. They're boosting and helping maintain steady employment for the railroad workers. In other words, they're offering you an invitation to do business with them.

Brainerd stores have always been hospitable. The goods, the quality, the price, has always been equal if not superior to stores anywhere. Far off pastures may look greener, but, the inducements are no greater than you'll find right here in Brainerd.

Railroad men . . let's shop where shopping is good . . right here in our own community, with the stores that have responded to your call for co-operation in the "Ship and Travel by Rail" campaign.
